And it only costs one $ to purchase and run. Anyway, it had both the words E-TUNING and WRONG in the same sentence and I read this twice. Its not like I didn't look. I even looked at the link. For the most part, you're going to be getting what you pay for. What, exactly, is "extraordinarily cheap" about the WRONG? Do you know why anyone would be opposed to the E-TUNING? You do, don't you? Well, why not say it? Im not. I would use it if I was to find that so called Evil Twin attack. So you are in agreement with the E-TUNING then? Guess so. Just not with what you're saying. Hahaha. I'm saying that the WRONG should have NO PLACE in any kind of debate. You're being nice here, but I don't know why. And that being said, if you think they are the same thing, fine. But don't say that they are different if they aren't. First off, I don't believe the old Linset device was tied in with the WRONG -it is a totally separate issue. Second, they are identical. Second, when they say they do different things, that is true. I don't believe the WRONG does the same thing as Linset. I tried getting a Linset from them. They just told me to buy a WRONG and they would hook you up. I can't say that I trust that. I guess I have my own personal issue with the WRONG. I have the original, the WRONG, and I have bought the Linset device. So, when they say, "Here's a Linset if you don't have a WRONG" and they give me one, they're not following through on their offer. It's just like them saying, "We will give you one of our devices for free". I'm not taking the Linset. I was just trying to point out that the WRONG isn't an Evil Twin, and they are telling the WRONG is an Evil Twin -to paraphrase my title. OK, if the person saying the WRONG is an Evil Twin is just making that up to sound clever, I'll give him/her 82157476af
